CONFERENCES

Cold War East-West Divide: Conflict, Cooperation and Trade - Târgoviște, 6 September 2019

The aim of this event is to bring together established, senior and junior scholars and researchers from a variety of fields and perspectives (Cold War Studies, International relations, foreign policy, political sciences, history, economics, media studies etc.) to foster discussion on East-West contacts, whether they were characterized by conflict, competition, mistrust, trade, cooperation or compromise. Application deadline: 10 August 2019

Social Movements and Civil Society in CEE. Historical Legacies and Current Trends - Warsaw, 12-13 October 2019

The conference will focus mainly on the specificity of social movements and civil societies in post-communist Europe. The conference aims to take a closer look at these phenomena and to offer different empirical perspectives (based on narrative interviews, protest surveys, protest event analysis etc.), not only beyond progressive and formalized movements but also to uncover little explored lines of development, as well as fractures in the engagement of social activism in CEE. European Rust Belts. West-East Comparisons - and Beyond - Regensburg, 7-8 May 2020

Our conference attempts to stimulate a comparative discussion of the divergent developments of heavy industries in Europe since 1970. We seek to promote East-West comparisons in order to identify differences and - even more importantly - similarities. Glimpses across the North Atlantic to developments in North America are welcome as well, given the striking divergence of industrial developments south and north of the US-Canadian border in the Great Lakes region. Our aim to establish, insofar as possible, a framework to explain the different trajectories. What role did social actors such as managers, workers, trade unions, political parties, and government officials play in these processes? The (power) relations between them seem to have been a crucial factor. The manifold responses to the crisis, the importance of temporality and space and (non-) interventions by the state, the changes in shop-floor relations and work organizations are also topics of interest. Difficult Heritage of 1989 and the New Hegemonies in East Central Europe – Bremen, 5-6 November 2019

This two-day workshop addresses the caesura of 1989 not only as a turning point that triggered the emergence of new hegemonies, but also as a period marked by continuities that underlie the post-1989 transformations in the region. We want to examine 1989 as a transformative moment of empowerment and promise, but also as a period of tension and ambivalence, in which the existing value systems are either replaced or reinforced. Men & Masculinities under Socialism. A Social and Cultural History – Bern, 14-15 May 2020

This workshop aims, therefore, to stimulate new paths for writing the histories of masculinities under socialism, focusing especially on examining the meanings of masculinities in everyday life. In particular, it seeks to address work and the workplace, family and fatherhood, (domestic) violence, the army, religion, health and medicine, sport and voluntary associations, and sexualities and homosexualities.
