About the FORUM

Journalism Forum 2026: Knowledge Transfer on Current Issues is a one-day academic and professional conference bringing together representatives of academia, the journalism profession, the media, educational and public institutions, professional organisations, and other stakeholders connected with the field. It was launched as a space for the transfer and exchange of current knowledge, experience, and diverse perspectives on developments in journalism and the media. Instead of conventional presentations, thematic dialogues enable current issues to be explored from different perspectives and raise questions about their implications for journalism education. The Forum is designed around thematic dialogues with invited participants, selected for their knowledge and experience relevant to each topic.

About CEON

The Centre for Sustainability of Journalism Education (CEON) operates within the Faculty of Humanities at Juraj Dobrila University of Pula as an academic, professional, and educational centre providing holistic support for the development of journalism education. It connects diverse stakeholders from Croatia and abroad with the latest knowledge and practices relevant to the development of the field. The Centre's activities focus on research, the development of educational programmes and projects, the organisation of academic and professional events, the development of digital educational content, publishing, and national and international cooperation. In this way, CEON creates a space where new knowledge is connected with the needs of journalism education and the journalism profession, fostering continuous learning and collaboration.
